CO. CHARTER BODY OPPOSES ANNEXATION

Unalterable opposition to the plan to annex San Mateo county to San Francisco until the people of the peninsula county have had an opportunity to elect a board of freeholders and express their decision on the county charter form of government was the policy adopted Wednesday night by the San Mateo County Charter Study Committee.

Charter Support Shown

The organization met in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in San Mateo, with Frederick Peterson of Burlingame, chairman, presiding.

Charter advocates emphasized in a resolution adopted Wednesday that chambers of commerce, civic clubs and other organizations and citizens throughout San Mateo county have endorsed the charter movement, and have asked the opportunity to vote on the proposition before the annexation matter is placed on the ballot.

Merger Move Cited

It is cited in the resolution that the annexation proponents have indicated that they will strive to have an election held on the merger by April, which will be one month ahead of the election for a board of 15 freeholders.

"Such an election would militate against the success of the charter movement," the resolution read.

Those in attendance at the meeting included E. E. Bramble, C. A Buck, Frank F. Burrows, A. B. Cargill, J. W. Coleberd, John F. Davis, George E. Dunn, Heim Goldman, Alvin Hatch, P. Keary, Thomas E. Pennington, Joseph Quinlin, Arthur H. Redington, N. L. Rizzo, J. C. Russell, H. S. Thorne, Floyd B. Tower, George Whitworth and Ernest Wilson.

Peterson announced that the next meeting of the committee would be held on February 17.

3926 CATTLE IN S. M. CO. TESTED FOR BOVINE 'TB'

More than 42,000 head of cattle in 17 California counties were tested by state inspectors during the first three months the state's program for control of bovine tuberculosis has been in effect.

Of the total cattle examined under the eradication program, 2667 head of cattle were found infected, leaving 40,047 cattle which received the stamp of approval.

The eradication campaign is being carried on in 17 counties, Butte, Del Norte, Kern, Lake, Lassen, Los Angeles, Orange, Plumas, San Diego, San Mateo, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Shasta, Siskiyou, Tehama, Trinity and Ventura. In addition, testing operations will soon be inaugurated in Modoc, Mendocino and San Francisco counties.

The control program was inaugurated September 15, under an act of the last legislature, and 20 counties are included in the control areas for this biennium. The program is being carried on in co-operation with the federal government.

Results obtained in San Mateo county in the three-month period follow:

Herds tested, 59; cattle passed, 2945; reactors, 981; total cattle tested, 3926; infected premises, 27.

COURT OF HONOR HELD FOR SCOUTS

Boy Scout Troop No. 160 of Redwood City was formally installed with William Ungells as scoutmaster at ceremonies held Saturday evening in the Methodist church.

At a court of honor session the following awards were made: second class, Charles Fuller, Donald Locke, Fred Eyrond, Fred Duttweiler, Robert Boles, James Seitz, Robert Spencer, Merwin Bruck, Charles Pieri, Dean Summerfield, James Curran; first class, Henry Nelson, Gerald Smith, Merrick Hersey, Frank Savage; sea scout, ordinary class, John Diehle; life scout, Roscoe Savage; merit badges, Olin Smith, Roscoe Savage, Morton Schmidt, Frank Savage, Oliver Torley and Harold Wise.

Christy T. Allen was introduced as the new field executive for the Redwood City district by John Rhoda, Sea Scout leader. The Sea Scout band furnished music.

With 994,000 barrels of oil produced in India in 1930 the 1931 production fell short 150,000 barrels.

Good Progress Shown In Registering Voters

The 200 deputy registrars appointed recently by County Clerk E. B. Hinman, are working like beavers getting the names of voters on their books and have to date succeeded in securing 18,000 names. Mr. Hinman believes the total registration for the August primaries will reach the 40,000 mark. Last election the total was 35,000.

At the election in November, 1930, there were 25,000 republicans and a little over 5,000 democrats. This year there has been a considerable diminition in the number of republicans as against an increase in the democratic ranks. Last year the ratio was about five republicans to one democrat. This year it is about three to one. This will probably be the ratio for the year. In large voting precincts there has been a falling off of republicans and a corresponding gain of democrats, while the rural districts maintain an even keel of party affiliation.

San Mateo county has always been a rock bound republican district and accounted one of the big republican counties of the state, and while the usual majorities may be reduced this year it will, however, return a large lead for the G. O. P.

APPOINTED ADMINISTRATOR OF CHAS. BOCKER ESTATE

Yesterday Judge Buck appointed Richard Hadler administrator of the estate of Charles Bocker, deceased. The latter was one of the heirs of the estate of Lizzie Hadler but passed away before the estate was distributed.

Richard Hadler is an old timer in Redwood City. He was the nephew of the late Claus Hadler, who established the first brewery in the city. For many years the nephew served as a clerk in his store here. This was 40 years ago. Hadler has retired from business and resides at Palo Alto.

TABLES TURNED IN DIVORCE CASE

Mamie Rose brought suit some time ago against her husband, Joseph Rose, for an interlocutory decree of divorce on the grounds of cruelty. The trial of the case took place yesterday before Judge Buck. The fair plaintiff declared that her husband beat her and threw her out of their automobile. Rose countered in his testimony by saying that Mrs. Rose scratched him and bit him and otherwise mistreated him.

Judge Buck on hearing all the evidence declared in favor of the much-abused husband and gave him the divorce.

The plaintiff and defendant are colored citizens and work on the Moore estate near Menlo Park.

WRIT SOUGHT TO FORCE UTILITY

Thomas H. Pope and three others filed a petition Tuesday for a writ or mandamus with the superior court seeking to force the board of supervisors to call an election for formation of the Salada Beach-Brighton Public Utility District.

Judge Franklin Swart set February 11 as the time for the board of supervisors to show cause why the election should not be ordered. The supervisors refused recently to call the election because the proposed district would have encircled the existing Salada Beach district. District Attorney Edmund Scott said two districts having the same functions could not be established in the same area.

WILLIAM OVERTON CALLED BY DEATH

William J. J. Overton, a resident of San Carlos for the past six and one-half years, passed away early Wednesday at the Mills Memorial Hospital in San Mateo, to which place he was taken two days previous. JAMES MAPS WAY TO SAVE ROAD FUNDS

Hickey Challenges Engineer, Jury To Show Waste

Four major road projects in San Mateo county could be completed during the next 10 years without increasing the people's burden if present road funds were properly administered, County Surveyor James S. James declared in a report submitted to the board of supervisors.

This and other reports brought Supervisor T. L. Hickey, South San Francisco, to his feet, and he challenged the county surveyor and grand jury to show where the county road funds were being wasted.

Hickey declared that the San Mateo County Charter Study Committee was also "hammering on that point."

Dr. C V. Thompson, Burlingame supervisor, requested that Chairman Manuel Francis name a committee of three to study the grand jury's and surveyor's reports, and to bring back recommendations to the county supervisors as to carrying out the suggested improvements.

James declared that, with $4,000,000 to be available from state and local sources in the next decade, savings could be made which would go a long way toward paying the county's share of the Alameda de las Pulgas road to Belmont, the Junipero Serra road to Burlingame, the Half Moon Bay road and the Woodside-La Honda road. At the same time, he reported, normal maintenance of other county roads would be possible.

To achieve the savings, James finds these steps would be necessary:

(1) Unification of the road organization with one control instead of five.

(2) Classification of the roads according to importance and use.

(3) Proper planning of future construction for the benefit of the county as a whole.

(4) Proper control over both maintenance and new construction expenditures.

"The taxpayers and automobile owners are certainly contributing sufficient funds to be justified in asking for real road building results in addition to normal maintenance on existing roads," James said.

He said that estimated receipts for San Mateo county from state apportionment of gas taxes, license fees and motor franchise taxes will amount to $3,000,000 in te next 10 years, and that the county will spend $4,000,000 on roads in that period.

The budget this year provides for $402,586, of which only 13.4 per cent will go to new construction. During the past four years, James said, $1,280,598 has been expended on roads for an average of $320,149 yearly. An increase of 25 per cent is shown in the 1931-1932 budget.

"Judging from total costs and roughly figuring total mileage of county roads, our maintenance costs have been averaging between $700 and $1000 per mile, which, of course, is all out of proportion to results," James said.

Two Courses Open

Unification of road organizations, James reported, can be obtained by either of two methods:

(1) Under general laws.

(2) By county charter.

Under the first method, the supervisors would be empowered to appoint a county road superintendent to have charge of all road maintenance and construction under their supervision. The supervisors retain their legislative powers as to road budgets and the allocation of funds, but they can delegate all executive powers to the road superintendent. They can also require the county surveyor to act as road superintendent.

James reports that under this plan, the counties of Fresno, Sacramento, Orange, Ventura, Kern, Santa Barbara, Solano, Napa, Riverside and Monterey have reorganized their road departments and are now obtaining very good results.

The second and the best method, said James, is the setting up of a modern road organization under a county charter. Five counties, all obtaining excellent results, are now using that system, he said, as follows: Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Butte, Tehama and Alameda.

Summing up his report, James points out that at least 15 out of the 48 counties have reorganized their road departments and have obtained marked results. "No reason exists," he told the supervisors, "why San Mateo county should not obtain as good results."

Mills To Take Mellon's Post In Treasury

Ogden L. Mills is to be the new secretary of the treasury of the United States, to succeed Andrew Mellon, who is to be appointed ambassador to England.

Ogden Mills spends a month or more every winter at the Millbrae estate in this county. His younger years were passed at that palatial home.

The vast estate consists of many hundred acres. A portion of the vast area was given to the City of San Francisco for an airport.

San Mateo county claims the new treasurer as its own and takes a pride in presenting Mr. Mills to the nation as it did Herbert Hoover, whose home casts its shadows on the lower end of San Mateo county as does the home of Secretary of the Interior Ray L. Wilbur.

San Mateo county is blest as it now can boast of having a president, a secretary of the interior, a United States senator and a secretary of the treasurer as residents of the peninsula.

The new treasurer has been a resident of New York for some years. He represented that state in congress for several terms. He made a campaign for governor of his state but was defeated by Al Smith. For the past three years Mr. Mills has been under secretary of the treasury and had a good tutor in Mr. Mellon, who now retires and turns over the portfolio to his understudy.

D. O. Mills, grandfather of the secretary, was identified with the early history of California. It was he who laid the foundation for the vast Mills fortune, worth many millions. The town of Millbrae is named in his honor.

Darius Ogden Mills came to San Mateo county from Columbia, Tuolumne county, where his first banking business was founded and from which he branched into the banking business in Sacramento and San Francisco. D. O. Mills was born in North Salem, New York, September 23, 1825. On September 5, 1854, he was married to Jane Templeton Cunningham of New York. His early career as a clerk was in New York City as cashier of the Merchants National Bank of Erie County, Buffalo. In 1849 he came to California and after a short period as a merchant, founded the banking business of D. O. Mills & Company. From 1864 to 1867 he was president of the Bank of California in San Francisco. He was a regent and treasurer of the University of California from 1868 to 1880. The magnificent home in Millbrae was his pride and joy and on its spacious acres he built up a fine herd of dairy cattle. Although he spent much of his later life in New York, his death occurred at his home in Millbrae, in January, 1910, where he died of heart trouble.

His son, D. Ogden Mills, father of the treasurer, was for a number of years a prominent financier of the East, and his daughter, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, whose husband was a famous newspaper man and ambassador to England, spends her time between her home at White Plains, New York, and Millbrae. Mrs. Reid, as a memorial to her father, erected and now maintains the Mills Memorial Hospital at San Mateo. Mrs. Reid is known for her charities and good works.

ALBERT CRYER PASSES IN N. Y.

Albert A. Cryer, 76, president and owner of the Cryer Return System Co., and a well known eastern inventor, passed away Monday in New York. He was the husband of Mrs. Helen Cryer, the sister of August J. Fromm, Redwood City hotel man.

Mr. Cryer made a visit here six years ago, and Mrs. Cryer was in Redwood City last summer. It is believed that she will return to this city soon.

COUNTY PORT GROUP DELVES INTO PROBLEM

Committee Holds Its First Session At Belmont

Showing marked interest in the proposed creation of a deep water harbor at Redwood City through the formation of a port district of county-wide dimensions, the newly appointed county harbor committee met in Belmont Wednesday night.

In its first meeting, which followed dinner in the Blue Lantern Cafe, the committee asked a great many questions, and indicated that the project was meeting with even more support in some quarters outside of Redwood City than it is here.

Carl Stoner, chairman of the Citizens' Harbor Development Committee of Redwood City, the parent body of the larger committee, presided last night, and Howard I. Wood, manager of the local chamber of commerce, was secretary

Next Thursday night at 6:30 the committee will meet in in the Benj. Franklin Hotel at San Mateo, when a formal organization will be set up, probably under a chairman not of Redwood City.

Among the speakers last night were Stoner, who made the introductory remarks; Carl Wagner, who spoke on the physical aspects of the port; Wood, who discussed the industrial and railroad angles; Edward Harrison, who described the financial aspects, and Elmore B Hinman, whose topic was "The Projected District—and Why."

Judge Rudolph Rapsey of San Bruno proved an ardent supporter of a county port at Redwood City, and so did Judge John J. McGrath of San Mateo.

Guy Smith, representing the coastside, pointed out that it would make possible future harbor work at Half Moon Bay. He said the same thing holds true for Belmont, South San Francisco and other communities on the bay shore line.

JESUIT PROVINCE OF WEST DIVIDED

A decree from Rome, dividing the California province of the Jesuits into two independent provinces, the province of Oregon and the province of California, was announced by the Very Rev. Wlodimir Ledochowski, S. J., general of the Society of Jesus.

The province of Oregon receives its name from the famous Oregon territory which comprised nearly the same districts now embraced in the present province, the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana. The Oregon province also has charge of the Indian missions in those states, and the Alaska missions heretofore under California rule.

The California province embraces the States of California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona together with the Chinese mission and university in Shanghai and Nanking.

The first provincial of the Oregon province is the Very Rev. Walter Fitzgerald, S. J., who has been vice-provincial of the Jesuits in the Rocky mountain region, the name of the former vice-province of the North.

The entire Jesuit territory, divided by the Jesuit general's decree today, was formerly under the rule of the Very Rev. Joseph M. Piet, S. J., who remains California provincial of the Society of Jesus. His official residence is in San Jose.

MOULTON VOTED INTO SOCIETY

Election of Dudley Moulton, director of the State Department of Agriculture, to a fellowship in the Entomological Society of America, became known here today.

This honor was conferred upon Director Moulton at the recent convention of the organization in New Orleans, and this action is regarded as recognition of his exhaustive research work along entomological lines.

Director Moulton is recognized as a national authority on thrips, and has assembled what is considered to be the world's largest known collection of thrips.

Moulton's home is in Redwood City.

In Illinois, the resignation of a public official does not become effective until a successor has been appointed and qualified.

Hinman Installs New Sys. of Filing Voters Certificate

County Clerk E. B. Hinman has installed a new method of filing affidavits of voters in his office. It is the visible index system that works like a charm for efficiency and convenience.

The new system makes a perfect and accurate record of the voter and is permanent. The certificates of the electors are preserved and will last for all time. According to the new law, voters will only have to register when they leave their precincts or change their names. Of course it is to be presumed the ladies will change their names, some of them several times, in which case they will have to re-register.. This little inconvenience will not deter them from marrying however—it shouldn't.

The big gain by the system is at the polls. Heretofore a loose leaf book of the certificates was sent to the election officers and much inconvenience was encountered in looking up names of the voters as they approached the booths. By the new method this work is avoided by a system which classifies every certificate properly indexed. When the voter's name is called the clerk finds by opening the book containing the certificates, a full record at a glance, and no time is lost.

It took considerable time and patience to install the system in the clerk's office. It was in charge of the genial chief deputy, W. H. Agustus, a very efficient and capable official.

The county is growing by leaps and bounds and old and antiquated methods must be discarded to meet the growing demands of the ever increasing population.

Mr. Hinman is aware of this and is doing all he can to keep abreast of the onward march of progress.

AIRPORT ACTIVE DESPITE STORMS

Excerpts from semi-annual report of the San Francisco airport near San Bruno show the following facts:

"Despite the past December being the stormiest since the establishment of Mills Field, business falling below that of any month since January, 1928, passengers carried at San Francisco airport during the second half of 1931 increased 72 per cent and flights were 40 per cent greater than during the second half of 1930.

"From July 1, 1931, to December 31, 1931, inclusive, 18,897 passengers were carried in 11,360 flights as compared with 11,013 passengers and 8102 flights for the same period of the preceding year.

"During the latter half of 1931, 3009 transport ships flying on regular schedule, carrying 11,507 passengers, arrived and departed. Non-scheduled transient movements, including charter and private ships, numbered 2517 and carried 2958 passengers.

"Rainfall during December was greatly above normal, amounting to 11.17 inches, more than the season total for 1930-1931 when 11.12 inches were recorded in a year. A 24-hour rainfall of 2.37 inches was measured on the morning of December 27, and during the eight-day period from December 21 to December 28, inclusive, the precipitation was 8.30 inches."

Hearing of Flood Will Transcript Set Over to 11th

HEARING FLOOD—Times- Gaz..

The settlement of the transcript in the James L. Flood will contest case was up for hearing in the superior court yesterday and continued to February 11.

It is understood that at that time it will be settled and the voluminous document forwarded to the supreme court. Briefs will follow shortly after. It is asserted that the arguments are to take place before the court on or about May first. The attorneys associated in the famous case say it may be over a year before an opinion is rendered. The court is now two years behind in its work.

Alviso Treasury Jolts Officials

Alviso's one arterial stop sign, about which most of the official life of the community revolves, is the center of a financial inquiry which will bring Ben A. Chew, city clerk, and police judge, before the city council next Monday night to explain why there's only $2.68 in the city treasury.

Police Chief Bill Perkins, who is also the police force, says he has made 506 arrests of motorists who failed to observe the stop sign in the last six months. That would be $1,518 at $3 a head, but Judge Chew's record shows only 64 arrests and $128 in fines for city revenue.

Declaring Alviso's police force inadequate to compel motorists who failed to heed the traffic citations to appear, Judge Chew declares this accounts for the discrepancy between his records and those of the chief. He will appear before the council with his books next Monday night, Judge Chew said, "and they will be in shape to confound my detractors."

Ben Chew is an old Redwood City boy, having been born and raised here. In his youth he was a duck hunter on the local marshes, killing game for the San Francisco market. He was the son of the late Mrs. Titus, whose husband conducted a blacksmith shop in the old Titus building on Main street. He was a member of the firm of Hilton and Titus. Judge Chew at one time conducted a restaurant in the same building. Chew was a pal of the late John F. Ford, both making trips to the Behring sea in pursuit of seals. Chew is well known to all old timers in Redwood City. He attended school here in the latter sixties. For over a quarter of a century he has been city clerk of Alviso.

The San Mateo County Republican Committee is scheduled to meet this afternoon in the courthouse at 4 o'clock. A full delegation is to be present to adopt resolutions endorsing the administration of Herbert Hoover and urging his re-election. Resolutions endorsing the candidacy of Senator Samuel M. The meeting is to be called to order by Chairman Horace Amphlett.

D. E. O'Keefe, treasurer, will report the condition of the finances of the committee.

The following resolutions endorsing Senator Shortridge will be offered for adoption:

Whereas, the Honorable Samuel M. Shortridge, United States senator, of California, is seeking renomination and re-election, and

Whereas, he is a resident of Menlo Park, county of San Mateo, State of California;

And Whereas, Senator Shortridge is a member of the powerful senate finance committee in addition to whcih fact he is the best qualified republican in the state to present and fight for the enactment of the laws beneficial to the state of California, and also he is a ranking member of the naval committee and should he be returned to the senate, he would most likely be chairman of that committee; and this is all important to the state of California;

Now therefore, we, the republican County Committee of San Mateo County, urge every citizen to support the candidacy of the Hon. Samuel M. Shortridge for United States senator, and we, as such committee, heartily endorse his candidacy, feeling that his return to Washington as United States senator will be to the best interests of the state of California.

GIRL SCOUT ACTIVITIES FOR QUARTER PLANNED BY LEADERS

GIRL SCOUT activities in Sequoia district for the next quarter were outlined by scout sponsors and leaders at a joint meeting this week.

The financial campaign is scheduled to start March 3 at a "kick-off" meeting when Miss Oleda Schrottky, national staff member, will be the speaker. The campaign will close March 12, which is the Girl Scout birthday. Other events arranged are a regional conference at Asilomar, March 18 to 20, and the visit of the national president of Girl Scouts Inc., Mrs B. O. Edey on March 23.

Mr. Bert Werder spoke before the leaders' section urging them to spread the policy of conservation through their work in the troops, and asking them to join the organizations seeking to secure the Butano territory for a state park. Mr. Werder explained the process of planting and caring for redwood seeds and left enough seed with the leaders to allow each troop some for experimenting. It is hoped that the Sequoia District Girl Scouts can raise and set out 1000 trees as their share in the nation-wide tree planting program celebrating the Washington bicentennial. The work will begin with each troop planting a flat of redwood seed during the week of February 22. Some Brownie packs are also cooperating.

Members of the winter training class, conducted by Miss Ruth Jaynes for the Sequoia District Girl Scout Council, have been studying the national set up of Girl Scouts Inc. The 19 members are divided into patrols. They are Mrs. Luna Whitcomb, Mrs. Gladys Moulthrop, Mrs. Verita Adams, Mrs. Lucille Praetzel, Mrs. Louise Jaycox, Mrs. Barbara Roberts, Mrs. Edith Hinchman, Mrs V. E. Gleason, Mrs. Lowry S. Howard, Mrs. Z. T. Thorning, Mrs. John Gill, Mrs. Kate Morrison, Mrs. Lula Coats, Mrs. Miriam Hildebrant, Mrs. Gertrude Collett, Mrs. Bertha Andrews, Mrs. Grace Berry, Mrs. Lulu Martens and Mrs. Cora Murad.

The patrols have started crayonexed banners, are working on the tenderfoot test, and hope to have all members complete their one-way ticket to the "Land of Be Prepared" at tomorrow's meeting. The meetings are held in the girls' social clubroom of Sequoia high school at 10 o'clock Tuesday and Friday mornings. Any one interested is invited.

The Live Oak troop has set the pace for all troops meeting in the Girl Scouthouse with a troop pennant made by Alice McCarthy to fulfill her second class sewing requirement. These girls are also speeding up their troop activities by means of an inter-patrol contest.

Attendance, dues, scout progress, finished projects, and uniforms win points for a patrol. Margaret McCarthy and her Poppy patrol were in the lead at the first meeting.

Chickadee patrol has elected Alice McCarthy, patrol leader; Pauline O'Brien, secretary; Jean Smith, second, and Dorothy Evans, color guard.

In Court of Honor, where the leaders and patrol officers decide the program for the next meeting, and discuss troop business, it was decided to have a surprise for the troop in keeping with Valentine Day at the next meeting, and the patrol leaders reported that their girls had voted to reduce troop dues to 5 cents a month. Mary Ellen McCarthy was the reporter for this week.

Woodside

The Woodside Parent-Teacher Association celebrated the anniversary of its founding on Thursday with an afternoon of festivity at the school auditorium. There were reports of officers, speeches and letters of felicitation interspersed with songs of George Washington's time sung by the pupils of the primary grade and a one-act play dealing with the life of Washington, presented by the older pupils under the direction of Miss Alice Smith. A life membership in the order was presented to Mrs. John D. Gish, past-president of the local chapter. Refreshments were served by pupils in costumes of the Revolutionary War period.

Mrs. Emma Andreen is spending the week in San Francisco, visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Harrison.

The teachers of the Woodside school, together with the two student teachers training here, are planning to take those pupils of the school who are studying the geography of China on a tour of San Francisco's Chinatown. A special police escort has been promised by Chief of Police Quinn and the tour will include joss houses and theaters as well as stores and restaurants.

William Morrison, proprietor of the Live Oak Garage, has been elected to membership in the Woodside Volunteer Fire Department in the place of William Langley, who recently moved to Palo Alto.

Miss Elsa Muller was in San Francisco on Tuesday competing in the bowling tournament in progress there.

William Byrnne, who, in recent years has always been found at this season praying for rain, is now praying for fair weather in order that he may get his plows to work.

The baseball team of the Fire Department is taking every opportunity offered by the weather bureau for some spring practice. The record of victories last season set so high a standard that the team will have to play super-baseball this year to live up to its reputation.

Joseph Giampietro, recent purchaser of the Langley property, is planting an orchard on the southwest hillside. This is one of the highest knolls in Woodside and with its sunny exposure should mature early crops.

Council Steps Cautiously In Region of Higher Tax

With cries of "reduce taxes" coming into one ear, and "give us jobs on public projects" heard by the other, the city council this week was placed in an uncomfortable spot when it was called upon to place two bond issues totaling $125,000 before the people in April.

After due consideration, during which worthy arguments were advanced in favor of both the $65,000 park bonds and the $60,000 library bonds, the majority of the council members did for the city, what they would have done for their private businesses—proceeded with caution until the trend definitely is toward "better times."

It is all very well to say that the "small home owner" will not feel that additional dollar or two which the library and park bonds will add to the tax bill, yet a study of the delinquent tax rolls makes it appear that for citizens the burden already is more than they can bear.

Situation in China Today Provides Geneva Group With Fresh Incentive

The disarmament conference opens today in Geneva to the accompaniment of queries from all corners of the world as to the reason for meeting to talk about arms reductions when there is a hideous war of alarming proportions now raging in China.

To ask why an arms conference should be held in the face of an existing war is much like asking in time of an epidemic why hospitals, public health departments and medical research laboratories should persist in their activities since their former work had been incapable of preventing the current outbreak.

The situation today in the Orient instead of providing a reason for abandoning the disarmament movement merely dramatizes effectively the reason why the movement should be prosecuted with increased vigor. We do not mean that this nation or any other nation should immediately sink all of its fighting ships or in any way curtail at this time the strength of its defensive forces. It may be necessary to expand them at an early date to meet an emergency situation in the Far East. But, as Bishop Edward Lamb Parsons pointed out in his talk at Stanford Sunday night, "Had Japan not had her instrument of attack perfected, what is going on in Shanghai today could not have happened."

The fulfillment of the ultimate disarmament hope will not be brought about in a day, a year, or a decade. The world sheds ancient customs and deeply-rooted ideas slowly, reluctantly. It takes years to get used to a new idea, before any hope of generous action on it can be expected. The work of the disarmament conference for some time will undoubtedly be that of getting the world accustomed to the thought of further defense reductions. But the fact that nations can be induced to send delegates to meet together at a disarmament conference in time of actual war is a striking evidence that material progress has been made already in the movement.

Certainly the situation in China today, depressing as it is, should stimulate the Geneva delegates to resolution NOT to abandon a movement, which, had it been prosecuted more vigorously in the past, would have prevented the war now rife in the Far East.

Big Bargain Days Coming Again on February 19, 20

Those ever popular Dollar Days of the Redwood City merchants—the biggest bargain event in the city during the year—are coming again on February 19 and 20. Every merchant will be "in" on the two-day bargain carnival this year, and plans are materializing rapidly for the event, the Redwood City Retailers announce.

This is the fifth in the yearly series of bargain days. Each succeeding event has seen a tremendous growth in volume of sales for the merchants and each year sees bigger savings for the buyers. The Retailers point out that the designation Dollar Days does not mean that items will be limited to that price, but is the popular designation of a bargain event affecting every type of goods within every price range. In this way, every merchant in the city can and will join in the gala bargain event.

Local and peninsula shoppers await with eagerness the fifth of this series of bargain days!

POP'S COLUMN

WHY wives—as well as mothers—get grey: A man stepped into a place where there is a telephone; called a number, and we heard him say: "Well, I'll try to be home about half-past eleven, I guess." For making an indefinite appointment I reckon that is about 100 percent.

I hear that a certain trucking contractor, who is doing some work not far from here, is in a pickle with the state labor commission, on a new angle. It is alleged that he, or his agent, went back East some weeks ago and bought a fleet of trucks; then, to get the trucks out here, he rounded up a bunch of young garage and automobile mechanics, who were out of work, and told them that if they would drive these trucks out to California he would give them jobs when they got here at seven dollars a day. The young chaps were tickled pink; a trip to California in the winter, and a fine job waiting when they got here! Who wouldn't jump at a chance like that? But when they arrived here with the trucks they found something different; they were given one or two days work each, and then told they were no longer needed—no more work! Well, the matter is in the hands of the state labor commission and—those boys will not have to walk back to their homes in the East!

The esteemed Pacific Rural Press devotes considerable space to advocating soil feeding. In the current issue of the journal is shown a picture of a Santa Clara county prune orchard that has been wonderfully improved by applications of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, with resultant "more and better prunes." All of which is all right, but the P. R. P. should have added one more thing to make the result read: "More prunes, better prunes, AND CHEAPER PRUNES!" Prune prices this last season reached the lowest point known in the industry. The best thing that could possibly be done for the prune industry in this county would be to pull out every prune tree and go back to ground crops. There never has been any profit to the grower in raising prunes. On the contrary, prune growing has ruined a majority of those engaged in the industry.

"Well, we hope there will be no scrap," said a prominent member of the American Legion the other morning, during a discussion of the Japanese situation. "We hope there will be no scrap; but if there must be one, there are two million world-war veterans ready to brush up the old brass helmets and start in right where they left off a dozen years ago!"

One thing this "so-called" depression has done for me—it has sorta reconciled me to doing without a lot of things I never expected to be able to have anyway.

I've been told frequently that every woman expects the man she marries to be a model husband—but not a sport model.

We talk in the air again. People are asking, What can be worse than war? Well, here's one answer, taken from the back of the book: 50,510 members of the A. E. F. were killed in action and died of wounds in 18 months of the world war; 182,674 members of the A. E. F. were wounded, not mortally, in action during 18 months of the world war; AND—53,650 persons were killed in automobile accidents in the United States in 18 months ending December 31, 1931; AND—1,576,840 persons were injured, not fatally, in automobile accidents in the United States in 18 months ending December 31, 1931.

And another thing I find in the book: The annual economic loss due to automobile accidents in the United States is $2,500,000,000; while the annual cost of public cshool education in the United States is $2,200,000,000. In other words, automobile accidents cost $300,000,000 more every year in the United States than the public school system costs.

And while we are on these jolly statistics, why not say also, that in 1931, in the United States, 1,032,000 persons were killed or injured; and that number lacks only 10,000 of equalling the entire population of the states of Nevada, Delaware, Wyoming, and Washington, D. C.

Yes, wars are bad; but they do end sometime, while automobile accidents go right on year after year, and each year the figures grow greater than in the preceding years. The United States is forced into war, sometimes; but automobile accidents are just something that we think up ourselves, and go into voluntarily, like.

I'm going to wind up this week's string with a quotation from a man who can really write things people like to read. I wish I had his ability. Anyway here is what I am quoting from this feller:

H. L. MENCKEN seems ever to enjoy romancing in print about the good old boozey days in newspaper work, telling how the boys managed to keep stewed during most of the off-hour time and how pleasant managing and city editors were about it. I note in Baltimore Evening Sun for January 11 a two-column contribution from his grist mill which breathes unfaltering love of journalism in the grand manner of the nineties. In this article Mr. Mencken states that he went to work as a newspaperman just 33 years ago, "a slim and even cadaverous youth of 18." He describes how, as the linotype and advertising lineage in time entered the newspaper office, drunkards were heaved out and all over the country a new order was established. Though Mencken stands for the Bohemian tradition in the minds of young newspapermen of this generation, and does a heap of fast-language writing on the booze subject, he is not and never has been a souse and I note in this Sunpaper article his assertion:

"During my apprenticeship I was introduced to the theory that many of the wettest of my elders were geniuses behind their breaths but when as city editor, I began to handle their copy I discovered some doubts about it. The truth is that, in those days as in these, good work was done only by sober men."

You see, I don't like this feller Mencken, and he wouldn't like me, if he knew me. He is the publisher of the American Mercury, which I consider one of the vilest caricatures of real journalism that ever was printed in this world. And so it has done me a lot of good to see the really great writer whom I have quoted, run this feller Mencken up a tree and nail him there, hoping these few lines may find you all the same.

UP AND DOWN THE STATE

WROTE THE ALGER BOOKS

A centennial which passed with what many an adult over 40 may decide was insufficient attention was that of the birthday of Horatio Alger, Jr. There are many who will attest that the 119 books which this man wrote were read eagerly in a day when there was not so much of variety in young reading. Alger, thoroughly respectable and certain to point the morals, had the approval of parents a great army of youngsters, some of whom perhaps were thus lured from what used to be called the devastating influences of "Diamond Dick" and his paper-backed companions.

Alger and Oliver Optic used the same methods and some plot to win readers, fame and money. Their heroes invariably were poor lads who succeeded in winning wealth—and the banker's daughter—by their honest qualities and commendable diligence. Over and over, with new names and settings, they told the same story and remained favorites until new writers came with braver stuff.

With the hundredth anniversary of Alger's birth we are reminded the old writer has achieved a new status. His books are items for the collector and prices of the first editions are going up.—Oakland Tribune.

If we are going to continue in Hawaii—as we are—there is much need of mutual understanding, and of rational safeguards based on such understanding. But heaven protect us from annexing any more half-civilized races!—Woodland Democrat.

CAN JAPAN MAKE THEM LIKE IT?

The Chinese horse can be brought to the water of the Japanese markets, but how is Japan going to make this horse drink?

Can China be starved into liking Japan, or be whipped into liking Japan, or be shot into liking Japan?

Is every piece of Japanese goods displayed in a store in China to be a mark of shame to the Chinese people?

Can Japan treat all of China as it has treated Korea, from which the native Koreans have retreated into interior Asia by the thousand to escape Japanese overlordship?

Japan might read a chapter in the colonial relations of Great Britain, its late political ally. Great Britain undertook to rule the Dutch Afrikaanders in Cape Colony. They retreated into the Orange Free State. Britain captured the Free State and the Dutch then migrated into the Transvaal. Britain fought a bloody war to overcome the Transvaal and whipped the Boers. Then after 15 years the British whipped them again.

Today the peaceful political masters of the Union of South Africa are these same Dutch.—Fresno Republican.

Our economic stagnation is the direct result of wasting the created wealth of generations in one grand splurge of war. All other explanations are ridiculous. Man cannot waste billions and pay no penalty.—Niles Register.

Keeping Disease Out of U. S.

In a report recently made public, Surgeon General H. S. Cumming of the Public Health Service points out that at the beginning of the past fiscal year cholera was present in epidemic form in several islands of the Philippine Archipelago. There was a minor extension to the city of Manila, some 50 cases occurring there. Interisland quarantine was enforced against several insular ports at various times during the year. It is not likely that this epidemic, however, followed any recent importation of the infection, as past history shows that cholera recurs in epidemic form in these islands every four or five years, and may be considered an endemic there.

During the past fiscal year no instance occurred of the importation from abroad of any quarantinable disease into the United States. Several cases of quarantinable diseases reached our quarantine stations and were detained.

Officers Alert

Health conditions during the year, as regards the possible presence of yellow fever near certain ports of South America on the Caribbean coast, particularly the western part, and on the east coast from the Amazon river to Rio de Janeiro, were such as to warrant the issuance of instructions to quarantine officers at stations located on the Gulf and Atlantic Coast south of the southern boundary of Maryland to be particularly on the alert in making the quarantine inspection of vessels which have called at the smaller ports along the east and Caribbean coasts of South America. It is understood that the Brazilian authorities are conducting an effective antimosquito campaign in the principal seaports and that danger of maritime spread is decreased accordingly. Information received from reliable unofficial sources indicates the occurrence of suspected cases of yellow fever in the interior of Colombia in the region of Santa Marta and Barranquilla, but as yet these reports lack official confirmation.

At domestic ports 14,955 vessels, 773,743 passengers, and 1,039,524 seamen were inspected upon arrival by quarantine officers. In insular ports 3417 vessels, 161,037 passengers, and 235,537 seamen were inspected, and at foreign ports 4132 vessels, 365,194 passengers, and 316,711 seamen were inspected prior to embarking for the United States. Of the passengers who embarked at European ports, 41,737 were vaccinated and 38,639 were deloused under the supervision of medical officers of the service. Clothing and baggage of these passengers amounting to 54,763 pieces were disinfected. In addition, medical officers of the Public Health Service examined 761,436 alien passengers in accordance with the immigration laws, and inspected 916,868 alien seamen.

Vessels Fumigated

A total of 4072 vessels were fumigated, either because of the occurence of disease on board or for the destruction of rats as a plague preventive measure. Of the rodents recovered following fumigation, 6073 were examined for evidence of plague infection.

The problem of the sanitary control of aerial navigation has been receiving international attention for several years, finally culminating in a proposed international convention for the sanitary control of aerial navigation. This proposed convention formed the principal topic for discussion at the two last meetings of the Permanent Committee of the International Office of Public Hygiene in Paris, October, 1930, and May, 1931, as well as at the meeting in April, 1931, of the Second Pan-American Conference of Directors of Health held in Washington, D. C., under the auspices of the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau.

Of international interest, also, is the problem of the control of psittacosis. This subject will form one of the major topics for discussion at the forthcoming meeting of the Permanent Committee of the International Office of Public Hygiene in Paris in October, 1932. The regulations of the United States for the control of this disease prescribed by an executive order issued by the president on January 24, 1931, restricting, for the time being, the introduction of parrots into the United States, have been modified during the past year to permit the importation of commercial shipments of these birds under approved sanitary restrictions relating to crates, air space, and other conditions of transportation.

War on Typhus

During the past year a change has been made in the application of the measures designed to prevent the spread of typhus fever at ports of embarkation. This step was taken in view of the better organization of sanitary services and improvement in sanitary conditions now obtaining all through Europe. Where formerly the application of the measures designed to prevent the spread of typhus fever was based on broad geograhical areas, now the application is contingent upon the actual endemic or epidemic prevalence of typhus fever in such ports, places or areas from which persons destined for the United States have originated or embarked.

Special studies of the fumigation of ships as a plague preventive measure which were begun last year at the New York quarantine station were continued during the past fiscal year with marked progress.

Examine Immigrants

There has been no particular change during the past year in the system of making medical examinations of applicants for immigration visas in their countries of origin in Europe. At the beginning of the fiscal year 1930, an office was opened at the American Consulate at Vienna, Austria, where applicants are medically examined before visas are granted. The system of medical examination of applicants for visas at consulates was inaugurated during the past year in Canada, Mexico and Cuba. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1931, a total of 103,078 applicants for immigration visas were given medical examination in the country of origin. Of this number 79,058 were examined by medical officers of the service attached to American consulates in Europe and 24,020 in countries of the Western Hemisphere. Fifteen thousand eighty, or 19.7 per cent of those examined in Europe, and 2467, or 10 per cent, of those examined in the Western Hemisphere were found to have mental or physical defects; 7413, or 9.6 per cent of the total examined in Europe were refused visas for medical reasons. Of 94,412 aliens who had been given a preliminary medical examination abroad and to whom visas had been issued, only 11 were finally certified upon arrival at United States ports as being afflicted with diseases necessitating mandatory deportation.

HONESTY GETS NO HEADLINES

If Diogenes were to come with his lantern her could find his honest man in America.

Back in 1907 a man named Jenkins died bankrupt, leaving debts of $1,200,000 as a legacy to his 26-year-old son. The boy felt that his father's good name was involved and set about to pay the creditors 100 cents on the dollar.

The debt has been paid.

Robert C. Jenkins is now 50 years of age and has spent his best years paying his father's debts. To do it he denied himself and his family the luxuries of life. His struggle is one of the quiet epics of finance.

The name of Jenkins is rather commonplace. But with the halo of this new honesty about it it shines in livid letters. Yet the heroic feat of repayment has not drawn any such headlines as the failure did some years ago. Being honest is not news. Dishonesty is the man that bites the dog. The world will never know the faithfulness of thousands of citizens making good in a quiet way.—Los Angeles Times.

Worth "a million" today, but how much when they're 30?

The parents of these twins "wouldn't trade them for a million!" But how much will they be worth when they are 30? That will depend largely on whether they are taught to save money.

Teaching children thrift is a subject on which your banker will gladly give you pointers. But to teach it successfully, you must practice it yourself.

Why not set the example for YOUR FAMILY by starting to save today?

I did not have to ask her what they intended to do with Loren Garde, who, as far as they knew, had cast his lot with the forces of revolution, who had hidden his identity behind the masquerade of insanity. I knew.

"What have they done with Manual?"

"Manuel?" she questioned. "Ah—Manuel; he of the dark face and heavy shoulders. They have done nothing; he is free—a good sailor and a brave man though somewhat stupid."

Now I laughed, laughed until I saw a deep hurt in her eyes and her chin begin to tremble, then I stopped, apologetic. "Perhaps," said I, "my moonmadness has never quite forsaken me."

She had called Manuel stupid! What was it Francisco had said to me? Ah, yes . . . "If the captain questions our innocence, and even be comes so suspicious as to confine us, there is yet Manuel and the mixed crew of this ship." Surely, Francisco had not done things by halves. If courage and brains would win, Bolivar would never lose.

"If it helps you to laugh in the shadow of the gallows, Monsieur Garde, your moon-madness is a blessed gift." She turned away as though to leave me, but came back again. "I—I want you to know that I have tried so hard to save you, but I am helpless; I am not even a pawn in this tragedy they call the game of empire."

"May I crave a favor, Your Majesty—just one—before you go?"

"Surely." She raised her fair face questioningly. "If there is aught—?"

Now, while she kept her face upturned to me, I studied the smooth forehead, the high arch of eyebrow, the deep blue of her eyes, the quivering lips and the tender curve of cheek and chin.

"May I tell you that you are beautiful, and may I offer apology for having followed you, for having wounded your—your—for having wounded De Fuentes . . . and for that night of madness and terror in New Orleans? I wonder if you have imagined me crazy."

"It is not that, Monsieur; I do not understand. I think we cannot read America. That you should laugh at the gallows seems strange to me. And that you should have followed us from New Orleans. Is—is that the act of a sane man?"

"No, Your Majesty, it is not." Could I tell her of my mad worship, of that overwhelming love of mine; would that have gained anything for either of us? To have told her would merely have added to her unhappiness, for I had only a short night of life left to me.

"I am going to Adolfo," she said at last, "and tell him that the Senor Americano is not responsible, that the Venezuelans, Perez and Santini, held him captive. Adolfo will do much for me."

"But not that, Your Majesty, for Adolfo does not love me. He has every reason not to love me, for I have wounded him."

"I shall try, at least."

I knew she would fail, knew she would not return, so I tried every conversational subterfuge to detain her, with no success, for she extended a hand to me, smiling "Adios."

Even as I held the slim fingers, the sound of a pistol shot came from the deck above us, followed by the roar of a commanding voice.

"Captain Alvarez," she said; "the voice of Captain Alvarez. What is it, Monsieur?"

Another shot, another yell; a shrill medley now, and swift, padding footsteps. Our guards disappeared in the gloom of the channel, running for the upper deck. The air was filled with the menace of an approaching storm as well as that of mutiny.

"What is it?" she screamed, holding to me. "What has happened, Senor, tell me?"

I laughed shortly. "The stupid Manuel is playing the game according to his orders. Unless something is done swiftly and well, this ship will be, very soon, in the hands of those who fight for Simon Bolivar. It is a floating arsenal, and is, therefore, a welcome prize for the revolutionists. We must act quickly."

"But you, Senor, are in the service—"

"Not at all; I have never served Francisco, nor Bolivar; only the Senorita—"

"Dulce," said she, completing my sentence.

Dulce! How prophetic had been that name, for it was at once a carees and a description. "Will you remain here, then, in safety, while I—?"

"No, Senor, no! I will go with you. There is Polito and—"

I knew she visualized Adolfo, but she did not call his name.

So, hand in hand we sped along the freight-cluttered channel. I led her to the companion ladder and half lifted her up through the quarter-deck hatch, from which position of vantage we were able to overlook the upper deck. It seemed at first deserted, but the report of a pistol came from the starboard rail abaft the mainmast, a shrill scream followed it, and a tall figure, lunging toward a slim boy whose body was braced against the bulwark, struck the rail, bent over it, and flopped back again to the deck, where he lay, grotesquely flattened. A puff of smoke wavered above the two figures.

"Mother of G—d," the Senorita breathed. "Polito! My brother has killed a man!"

Now other figures raced from the fore-deck and the forecastle; one of them, a heavy unwieldy figure with one bound arm, lifted a left hand and fired into the face of a sailor whose groping fingers, clutching wildly, found the throat of his adversary, and the two went down in a scrambling heap.

"Adolfo," cried the woman at my side, "Adolfo! Oh, the terror of this hour!"

"And the joy," I breathed, my soul atingle with the hope of freedom again.

"My brother," she gasped, "I must go to my brother!"

Well . . . as long as she didn't want to go to Adolfo.

The elements now had begun to add their fury to the storm of human hatred that already possessed the ship. I had seen these tropical storms before, and I knew that the greatest danger to the contending human forces on her deck but in the power of the approaching tempest.

I made my way in the rising tumult of the storm to the wheelhouse, which, as I had suspected, was empty. My puny efforts to bring the craft around were poor enough; yet I knew that, riding before the rushing wind, the plunging ship was due for certain disaster.

Gasping, I clung tenaciously to the straining wheel. The Santa Lucrecia, pitching prodigiously, drived into the body of a mountain of blue-green sea, and the mizzenmast came down with a note of rent timbers that lifted above the din of the storm. It fell aft, crushing the wheelhouse, but I had dived out of the path of its fall and, buffeted by the waters, had come up short against the low wall of the afterdeck.

Clinging desperately to a stanchion, I wondered if there was another soul alive on board the ship, which was now only a plaything of the storm. Faintly came the sound of another rending crash, and I imagined that the foremast had gone, for the laboring vessel, after heeling perilously whipped back to an even keel again.

While I crouched in the protection of the after-deck, the spirit of youth took hold of me, spoke to me—and the spirit of love also. She had come to see me, had glorified my prison, had let me feast my eyes upon the beauty of her face.

Spurred by a sudden resolve to find her, to save her, or to sink to the depths with her in my arms, I left my place of refuge and made my way by eccentric stages forward. I stumbled over a battened companion and rode the crest of a tumbling wave half the length of the deck. My outspread arms came in contact with a rail stanchion, and I held to it as the wave passed on.

In the piled-up masses of foam that beat over me I felt the clinging touch of a dress, my fingers found a slim arm, and I heard a shrill scream that rose above the roar of the tempest. The Senorita Dulce! In the semi-darkness she recognized me. A light of happiness took the place of the terror that had filled her eyes.

"Senor," she cried, the frail voice unconquered in the tumult, "I have been searching—"

I placed one arm around her, holding her close. "Are you afraid?"

"No," she said, smiling bravely and smiling, fainted.

Well, it was better. So, holding her, I waited for the storm to destroy us. I drew an abiding consolation from the thought that, if the sea claimed us, I should have her all my own to the last instant of my life.

Even as I waited thus the great ship stopped suddenly, as though it had met an invisible wall. The stern lifted skyward and the mainmast sheared clean at the partners, fell forward, tearing a great gap in the rail. Now the stern went down again with a sickening lunch and the bowsprit pointed toward the boiling clouds.

While the Santa Lucrecia, balancing upon a submerged reef that had caught her amidships, teetered like a sparrow on a twig, the rain ceased as suddenly as it had come, and the wind abated somewhat, though it still blew half a gale.

With the aid of the stanchion and the rail, I got to my feet and, stagering under the burden of the Senorita Dulce, went forward slowly along the plunging deck toward four men who were working at the davits of a starboard boat. A tall figure of the four resembled Francisco, so I bent my steps toward the larboard rail, where another group showed in the fading twilight.

Polito's anxious smile was a ghastly thing, for one side of his face was smeared with blood. He took his sister in his arms and turned to place her in the boat. As he did so Adolfo swung upon me with a clubbed pistol. I tried to dodge the blow and failed. The barrel of the weapon grazed my head and sent me spinning, and the tilting deck slipped from under my feet. Stumbling, I reached futilely for things to stay my descent, rolled, went through a wide space in the rail that the falling foremast had made, and fell for what seemed to my half-dazed senses immeasurable distances.

The plunge into the raging sea revived me instantly. I have always been at home in the water so the danger of drowning was remote. Wind and the waves carried me swiftly landward as the short tropical twilight faded into a starless gloom. A floating spar touched me and, holding to it for support, I waited.

In the murk a towering mass of darkness passed me, passed me silently, like a lifeless derelict riding before a storm. It passed on and I was left alone in the turbulent sea, a prey to doubts, to bitter disappointments and vague fears.

I heard at last the sounds of contact of the lashing sea upon the land. It was not the booming note of breakers on a reef, nor yet the rasping hiss of waves that rode along a sloping beach; it was more like the rush of a mighty wind through the forest, whereat I wondered even more until a giant wave, receding, left me stranded in a tree. I held on while other waves rushed past and over me, held until the storm had spent its fury, until the water had subsided.

CHAPTER III

Tucayan

The morning sun dried my clothes and filled me with comfortable warmth. Except for inconsiderable soreness from the buffeting of the storm and a tender spot on my head that kept Adolfo in my mind, I was none the worse for the extraordinary experience in which I had reached the shore of Venezuela. That I had an implacable enemy in the person of Adolfo de Fuentes was somewhat disquieting, for Spain ruled Venezuela, and if De Fuentes survived the wreck my stay in the country would be to me a constant source of danger. Yet to leave Venezuela would be to turn my face from the lodestar of love that had directed by actions since that night of moon-madness in the Place d'Armes. If the Senorita Dulce lived she was even now in Venezuela, and where the Senorita was there I would be also.

I turned my face to the southward and moved through the solemn silence of primeval forests. I left the jungle floor at last and climbed the timbered slopes to the crest of a mountain range that paralleled the coast. Extending far to the south, I saw the checkered green and brown of cultivated fields, and the irregular outlines of a few tiny villages, and even farther southward yet the forested slopes began again, to disappear in the misty distance.

Musing, I looked upon this land of beauty, where peace should have reigned supreme, but did not, because Bolivar and his revolutionary army contended for its possession against La Torre, the right hand of Ferdinand VII, august king of Spain. Even as I stood, lost in admiration of the lovely scene, the clank of arms came to me, and the clattering of shod hoofs upon a rocky road. A body of soldiers mounted on mules passed in single file along a narrow way that the underbrush had hidden from my view. I watched them from the concealment of a great ceiba tree.

"A sweet reception," said a voice in Spanish, "to our colonel. I wonder if he lost his lady-love."

"A thing of no importance," said another; "there are many more—and De Fuentes never lacks a lady-love."

Then Adolfo had been saved . . . but the Senorita Dulce! Ah—had the storm, after all, claimed that lovely lady? My mad worship would not let me believe it. Surely the Master of our souls would not have brought me through and taken her. Well, I would know, for they were evidently going to Adolfo now; they were traveling west and the Colonel's destination had been Caracas. Caracas, therefore, was east.

After the sounds of their passing had died away I descended the rocky declivity to the road and bent my steps to the east. I heard, after three hours of rapid walking, the mingled noises of a town, so, leaving the road, I beat back into the forest and passed north of the settlement, which, I was to learn was Maracay, a city on the lake.

Just before the sun went down I came to a village unexpectedly, because it did not offer the mixed noises that Indian villages always have. The village lay under the somber silence of a tomb. I was in it before I realized that any settlement was near.

The first few jacals I passed were in ruins, and neither dogs nor children came out to greet me. I began to wonder if the storm had reached this far. Now I came across a prone figure in the path, a flattened figure with face pressed against the earth as though he were endeavoring to look through it. I had seen dead men before; I had seen scores of them upon the battlefield. Now other figures—a woman and a child—lay before me; and now five men upon a single gibbet, and a boy of ten or less hanging by a vine around his neck, his slim bare feet pointing pathetically toward the earth. Every house was down—burned or crushed as though a giant hand had pressed upon them, and every occupant was dead.

I went through the awful length of that silent village—which must have had three hundred souls—with a dreadful desolation of death around me, and dropped to my knees at the end of the street of terrors and raised my face to the graying sky. A figure rose up beside me, rose up slowly, the horribly emaciated figure of an aged man whose unseeing eyes were fixed upon space and whose thin lips were forming faint words. "My wife," he whispered, "and the two boys—and a girl—"

He was silent a moment. "Gone, all gone!"

"Who did it?" I inquired. "In the name of God, Senor, who could have done this thing?"

"Morales," he grasped. He drew in a long breath for one last effort, raised a right hand in half a salute, and whispered: "Viva Bolivar!"

Now, like a man possessed, I got to my feet and ran through the wood; ran madly, wildly, stumblingly, frenziedly, wringing my hands and calling down the curses of God upon a people who would do so atrocious a thing. Through the long night I went, raving; until I fell at last exhausted, and awoke with the blessed sun upon my face.

With much labor, for my body seemed to be the habitation of a hundred aches, I got to my feet and stood in a wide road. Flanking the road was a broad ragged hedge, over which a man leaned, who considered me with mild concern in his blue eyes. He pointed the long barrel of a gun in my general direction; upon his head he wore a wide sombrero, and on his profusely freckled face a friendly grin.

"Hi, towhead," said he, and while I stared, marveling, he continued: "are beds so scarce you must sleep beside the road and pillow your head upon a stone?"

"Name of G—d!" I gasped, for the horror of the night still bore upon me.

"Humph, French." He thought a moment. "Oh, well, if it's French you want here goes . . . though it seems a little odd that an Irishman from London should be speaking French in Venezuela to an American."

I was sure then that I was awake and that the figure beyond the hedge was no apparition. "I am not French," I explained, "though I have lately come from France. You gave me so severe a shock that I reverted to the tongue of my mother, a thing I often do. Besides, I have just left a village of death, and the terror of the thing is still with me."

Gene Thiele Stars As Locals Win, 36 to 28

By EL THOMAS

Redwood City Eagles' brilliant play in the second half, engineered largely by Gene Thiele, vastly improved center, gave them a 36-28 victory over the Burlingame Ramblers in the high school gymnasium Wednesday and put the Eagles into a tie for first place with the South San Francisco Merchants for the leadership of the Peninsula Basketball League. The Redwood City Native Sons defeated the Ravenswood Stars by a score of 28 to 1 in the preliminary game.

The Eagles-Ramblers battle had all the aspects of a championship event during the first half, when the two teams played on even terms to wind up at 16-16 at the half. Superior rebound play on offense gave the Ramblers a slight margin early in the game, but Johnny Weir came through with two free throws to tie the score and with an arch shot to take a 6-4 lead. Joe Batchelder dropped a long one for the Ramblers and repeated to put his team in the lead.

Tom Shine, Eagle guard, made the best individual play of the game when he intercepted a pass and dribbled under the basket for a field goal after Batchelder and Hokamp had given the Ramblers a lead. Clyde Lutje tied the count at 14-14, and Ed Cullen dropped one for the Eagles. Sid Allen, who scored 12 points for Burlingame, hit the bucket to tie things up again as the half ended.

Thiele Engineers Rally

Center Thiele, leading a flash break for the Eagles, started things moving in the second half on a pass from Weir. The diminutive Eagle forward, whose attempted field goals hit the rim all evening, made up for it on free throws, gaining points on seven out of eight chances and putting the Eagles into a 24-18 lead. Thiele sunk another sucker shot, and then the Eagles wavered for a while after Thiele was retired on personal fouls.

Lew Stacy who had replaced Toby McLachlan at guard in the first half, held the Rambler scoring down during this critical period by some exceptional rebound recoveries, and finally Lutje and Weir found themselves again to run up the count to 36-24. Allen and Chaput countered with long field goals as the game ended.

Strong Defense Work

Effective defense work on the part of the Eagles was responsible for the victory. After the early minutes of play, the Ramblers did little scoring close in and it was only the excellent range work of Allen that kept them in the running. The Ramblers played a wide-open passing game which Weir and Thiele broke up in mid-court before it got into the danger zone.

The largest crowd of the season saw the Eagles maintain their bid for the peninsula loop championship. The Eagles, now fortified with three wins and no defeats, will play the South San Francisco quintet, which has an equally good record, at Redwood City Monday evening. Wednesday evening of next week the Eagles will play a return match with the Petaluma Eagles at Petaluma.

Where is this OLD PAPER MONEY?

Hidden away—in sugar bowls, boxes, mattresses, perhaps—is nearly 600 million dollars in old, large size currency.

It has not passed through the banks, or it would have been replaced by the new, small size paper money, introduced two years ago.

Think of it! Six hundred millions—missing. Much of it exposed to fire and theft; all of it idle, earning nothing.

Deposited in your bank, surplus funds go to work—helping to create credit for building homes, industries, payrolls—earning interest for you.

GOODBYE Teakettles, Water-backs & Tank Heaters!

Lower prices on AUTOMATIC Gas Water Heaters

Cost 50% LESS than in 1917... Cost 40*% LESS to OPERATE

thanks to Natural Gas

Special terms as low as $4.85 down, $3.85 a month.

THIS spring, 8,000 additional P. G. and E. customers are going to have plenty of INSTANT hot water with new Automatic Gas Water Heaters.

Automatics heat water for the lowest cost per gallon of any method of heating water in the home. Besides Natural Gas has cut the operating cost about 40%. This, plus the reductions in gas rates during the last 10 years, makes a total saving in fuel of more than 50%.

Put yourself down for an Automatic and have hot water any time of the day or night. Just turn the faucet for a tubful for bathing or a basinful for shaving.

Plenty of Automatic Hot Water dissolves dirt from 2 to 20 times faster. That saves your energy with the clothes and dishes. You do not wait for water to heat. So you save time also. Studies have been made which show that instant hot water saves from 4 to 6 hours each week. These hours are yours for reading, shopping, or entertaining.

Well-Made Water Heaters

You can buy an Automatic Gas Water Heater for 50% less than you could in 1917. Yet the new, improved Automatics are colorful and better built. And the terms? They are as low as $4.85 down and $3.85 a month, with a liberal trade-in allowance for your old non-automatic water heater or water-back. Never before have such easy terms been offered on Automatic Gas Water Heaters of this quality.

The Automatic Gas Water Heater puts a self-starter on your hot water service. It heats the water, stores it in its big thermos-like tank, and shuts itself off. No gas is wasted keeping the water hot because the tank is insulated. Architects and builders are now specifying Automatics for all modern homes. They are not a luxury but a necessity for healthful, happy home life.

* According to our gas rates, Automatic Water Heating with Natural Gas saves the average consumer 40%.

Custom rules that a Korean, passing his wife on the street, must ignore her as though she were a stranger.

Menlo Park

The death of Mrs. Ethel Cowperthwaite in San Francisco last Sunday was a severe shock to her many friends in Menlo Park. She was the wife of Charles Patrick Patridge, who grew to manhood here. The deceased was the niece of Mrs. R. E. Miller of Atherton, where the young woman passed a portion of her girlhood and where she resided until a short time before her death. For several years she was a member of the choir of the Church of the Nativity, her rendition of beautiful hymns adding to the devotion of the congregation. She also took part in entertainments given here in times past. Mrs. Patridge was a lovable young woman, kind and considerate. Her passing has brought sorrow to many a heart. Those who were intimate with her loved and liked her. Besides her husband she is survived by two pretty children. The last rites took place on Wednesday.

Any action concerning the acceptance of the street improvement work on Crane, Johnson, Rose and Millie streets and University drive was postponed by the city council with the granting of a 60-day extension to Clyde W. Wood, the contractor, to complete his contract. A group of property owners of the district presented a protest against the quality and condition of the work. Members of the council explained that the contract has not yet been completed and that bad weather has prevented the finishing of the job. In asking the extension of time, Wood declared that "a few minor portions of this job have been delayed" by the bad weather.

Paul Parmiani, San Francisco, has purchased the Menlo Creamery near the grammar school building from A. Dalpoggetto. The new comer is an experienced confectioner.

The rainfall for the last storm was .24 of an inch, making a total of rainfall for the season of 12.20 inches.

Mark Loughlin has positively declined to be a candidate for town trustee at the coming election in April. He never had any intention of seeking the office. This will put at rest any rumor that he had such aspirations. This leaves in the field W. H. Weeden, Thomas Furman and Mr. Tupper of Live Oak avenue. There is to be a scramble for the clerkship. Mrs. Kurtz will most likely seek re-election. It is said Phil Blanchard and Mrs. Walrath are casting a longing eye on the place, while others are waiting to be called. It is asserted that many will seek the treasurer's position.

Samuel M. Shortridge left on Saturday last for Washington to be at the bedside of his father, who has been quite ill for some weeks. Late reports are to the effect that the senator is recovering and will soon be able to take his seat in the senate.

Grand Trustee Miller paid an official visit to the local parlor of Native Sons last evening. A large attendance greeted the official. Mr. Miller paid a neat tribute to the parlor for its growth and the big attendance of members and the interest taken by the parlor in the work of the organization.

Chester Lee Carlisle of Menlo Park has filed in the superior court of this county the last will and testament of the late Lauretta Stedman Gee Carlisle. The petition for letters of administration is to be heard on February 25.

Postmaster Larrecou is around again after a week's illness. He has been confined to his home for several days. His friends are glad to see him at his desk in the postoffice building again.

On January 30 County Clerk Hinman of Redwood City issued a marriage license to James Blocker, 27, Menlo Park, and Thomasine Britanick, 16, Menlo Park.

Word was received here this week by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Quayle that their neice, Jean Cowley-Quayle, who is 16 years old, has successfully passed the University of Cambridge senior local examination. Jean is now a pupil at Brentwood senior school, Southport. Jean is well known in Menlo Park, where she has many friends, who are delighted to learn of her further success. While residing here, some years ago, she attended the grammar school, showing aptitude in her studies. The young girl, besides being a writer of much ability, is an accomplished musician.

Robert Eyre Girvin, a member of a pioneer family of Atherton, has just joined the editorial staff of the San Mateo Times. Mr. Girvin graduated with honors from Amherst College, Amherst, last June, having received a B. A. degree. He is an enthusiastic newspaperman and a writer of more than ordinary ability.

Miss Monnie Regan, whose home is at Boise, Idaho, and Miss Francis Woldson, Spokane, both attending the College for Women, San Francisco, were week-end guests of Miss Carmel O'Keefe, their classmate. The young girls are beautiful and accomplished. They graduated from the Academy of the Sacred Heart, Menlo Park, last June.

Jack Grill, the popular constable, has just purchased a new car, a limousine of the latest type. Mr. Grill is a very busy man whose duties take him all over the county in pursuit of criminals.

Archbishop E. J. Hanna will be here within two months to administer the sacrament of confirmation to a large class. Father Kennedy and Father Burke are preparing the boys and girls for the reception of the sacrament. The class will be composed of nearly 200 children.

Mayor W. H. Weeden, who was confined to his home during the week with a severe cold, has recovered and was at the city hall yesterday attending to routine business. Mrs. F. I. Kurtz, city clerk who has also been on the sick list, was able to be at her desk during the week.

Charles Wooster, Palo Alto, celebrated his 87th birthday last Friday. Many old friends called at his home to felicitate him on the happy occasion. Mr. Wooster came to the old Stanford home in 1877 as a coachman for the railroad builder and after the latter's death, was selected a night watchman at the tomb of his former employer. Mr. Wooster's boyhood was spent at Albany, N. Y., but came to the coast as a young man, spending some time at Sacramento, where he became acquainted with the Stanfords. He is the father of Mrs. George Casey of Palo Alto.

Mrs. A. C. Krom, an experienced dressmaker of San Francisco, has secured quarters in the Furnivall building on Oak Grove avenue and will open parlors there very soon.

W. P. Patching, who has been connected with the A. Schilling Company in San Francisco, has opened a grocery store on the Alameda, near Gordon street. He should do well in that prosperous locality.

Donald Livingston, 65, gardener at St. Patrick's seminary, Menlo Park, died last Wednesday morning at the Community Hospital. No relatives have been located.

John T. Aabel is the only candidate in the field so far for the position of Menlo Park elementary school board of trustees. The board consists of Mr. Aabel, Frank Johnson and John W. Morey. Friends of the incumbent believe he will be returned without opposition. The election takes place on March 25.

ACTIVITY MARKS 22nd ANNIVERSARY OF SCOUTS

With Redwood City's quota fixed at $1500, the annual Boy Scout campaign for funds to carry on work of the organization during the coming year begins February 8 and extends to February 22.

Edward T. Harrison heads the campaign locally. He will have the assistance of other men interested in scouting, and of Christy T. Allen, newly appointed field executive for this district.

Money Spent Locally

All money raised locally will be spent in this area, which includes Atherton, Menlo Park, Woodside, San Carlos, East Palo Alto and Las Lomitas. The money will go for the salary of executives, camping program, mailing, court of honor work, sea scouting, scout band, scout program and proposed cub scout units.

Frank Schwabacher, well-known peninsulan, heads the county-wide campaign committee, other members of which are Edward Harrison, Gustav Barth, Robert G. Hooker Jr., E. C. Lydon, Erwin F. Richter, Dr. F. H. Smith, Dr. J. C. McGovern, James Porter and Howard Park.

Redwood City committeemen are Edward Harrison, Wilbur Doxsee, James D. Hedge, Dr. W. B. Langston, A. S. Liguori, John Rhoda, Roscoe Savage, Carl Stoner, Edmund Scott, Z. T. Thorning, Carl Wagner, Bert Werder and Henry Witte.

Others in this vicinity on the committee are M. A. Harris, Clarence R. Walter, Charles O. Martin and W. H. Weeden.

Ambitious Program

Chairman Harrison announced: "I am very confident that Redwood City will continue its support of this movement which means so much in the lives of the boys. We have adopted quite an ambitious program for 1932 with the objective of increasing enrollment in scouting; a higher standard of advancement; more boys in camp and additional leadership.

"To enable us to reach these things we have engaged a full time field executive to work in the southern part of the county under the jurisdiction of the county headquarters. We have been working for some time to make San Mateo county a separate council from San Francisco, and I am happy to say that we were granted our charter as an independent council by the national Boy Scout office on January 1.

"Now we must justify that confidence and put this campaign over with the greatest of success."

New Troop Installed

Saturday evening, January 30, new scout troop No. 160 was installed during the Court of Honor Proceedings at the Methodist Church in Redwood City.

County Scout Commissioner Tom C. Douglas with the aid of Burlingame scouts, conducted the installation ceremonies. Wm. Ungles was commissioned as the new scout master. He announced a very ambitious program for the year.

Mr. I. Karmel presided over the Court of Honor session at which several badges were awarded. The Sea Scout band added color with their uniforms and music.

Anniversary Week

Redwood City scouts will join with the rest of the San Mateo county scouts and those of the nation in celebration of scouting's 22nd anniversary. February 8-14 has been set aside as National Boy Scout Week. The local scouts close a week of intensive activity with the Annual County Rally on Saturday, February 13, at the San Mateo high school gym.

Scoutmasters Roscoe Savage, Robert Steffens, William Ungles and Sea Scout Skipper John Rhoda of Redwood City are preparing interesting stunts for this event. Rhoda promises that the Sea Scouts will again "steal the show" as was the case last year.

The public is invited and encouraged to attend. The rally is always an unuusual gigantic pageant which never fails to please the crowds. The program starts at 7:45.

Stamp Collectors Plan Activities

The Sequoia Philatelic Society, which meets each Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at Sequoia high school under the leadership of C. J. Whitley, is planning a number of activities for those interested in stamp collecting during this new semester.

An effort is being made at this time to increase the membership. All collectors, both boys and girls, and men and women are invited to the meetings.

This club is one of the many special interest clubs which are promoted under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Dr. Phillips Speaks Before Large Audience

Dr. George W. Phillips, pastor of the Tenth Avenue Baptist Church in Oakland, addressed an audience of more than 500 Sunday night in the Congregational church. His subject was, "I Have Many Things to Say Unto You, But Ye Cannot Bear Them Now."

A male quartet composed of W. H. Doxsee, A. M. Cuthbertson, H. J. Phillips, and Otis M. Carrington, sang several numbers.

The service was conducted under the auspices of the Menokirk Club, and combined the congregations, and guests, of three churches.

Rev. Cavanagh Departs Today On "Mariposa"

The Rev. J. P. Cavanagh, pastor of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, sailed Tuesday at noon for Los Angeles on the S.S. Mariposa which left New York January 16 for her premiere voyage to the South Seas and the Orient, and arrived in San Francisco Saturday. The Rev. Father Cavanagh will serve as chaplain during the trip, and in his absence, the Rev. W. J. Flanagan will administer the affairs of the parish.

Mrs. John Ryan, wife of the general manager of passenger service of the Matson steamship line, to which the Mariposa belongs, was hostess to a group of girls Monday for an inspection of the ship, and entertained them later at luncheon at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel. They were the Misses Florence and Gladys Wikoff, Jean and Peggy Jessup, Martha Tinker and Louise Graf.

Rainbow Assembly Hostess Here At Instruction School

Redwood City Assembly, Order of Rainbow for Girls, was hostess Saturday at a school of instruction held in Masonic Hall for members from San Luis Obispo, Monterey, Watsonville, Pescadero, San Jose, San Mateo and Burlingame.

Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock to the 100 or more guests, at tables decorated with heather and lavender candles. Miss Helen Maninat, recently installed worthy advisor of the local assembly, and Mrs. William Dusel, mother advisor, were in charge assisted by other officers.

In the afternoon, at the school of instruction, which is an exemplification of the floor work of the ritual, Miss Maninat assumed her office, and the remainder of the stations were filled by officers from other assemblies.

Among the guests of honor were Mrs. Kate M. Nichols of San Francisco, supreme deputy; Mrs. Willa Helwig, junior past grand matron of the Order of Eastern Star; and a group of mother advisors of various assemblies; Mrs. Marjorie Thompson, worthy matron, and Mrs. Rebecca Weiss, associate matron of Sequoia chapter, O.E.S.

A number of the delegates from San Luis Obispo were guests of Rainbow girls here for the weekend.

Peninsula Wild Ducks

By Claude Fox

In previous articles written by me for the Times-Gazette I stated that at the time of my advent into the marshlands in pursuit of wild waterfowl, and for years previous to that time, wild ducks were here in countless thousands as well as large numbers of the different species of wild geese.

In making these assertions I have studiously avoided any attempt at exaggeration, but have rather underestimated the numbers of wild birds that visited us every winter. My old friend, Charles Gould, for whose judgment on this subject I have the greatest respect, as his prowess as a wild duck hunter is well known, declares that I am mistaken in saying the birds were here by tens of thousands, and he insists that they were present in millions.

The old-time scull boat hunters, Louis Werder and Charles Peterson, were shipping to the San Francisco market from twelve to sixteen hundred ducks each week, which means that each was making a kill of one hundred or more birds per day, and when I tell you that in the small creeks just back of where the Central Grammar School now stands, Chase Littlejohn, the well-known naturalist, whose home was on the banks of the creek, killed enough ducks to supply his family and have some left over for friends, and that the Fox family was at all times well supplied with the little green-winged teal which I secured while Harry Grimmenstein, the town marshal, was eating his supper, by sneaking along the banks of the slough back of our city hall, you will think I am romancing, but such are facts.

That the wild birds were here in vast numbers at that time is easily proven. I would not ask you to take the unsupported statements of either Charles Gould or myself.

The futtering wings now hum a requiem over all that is mortal of many of the old boys who are laid away forever, but fortunately there are a number still living who can tell the duck hunting boys of today that my assertions are authentic and reliable.

I would respectfully refer you to James Cullen and Walter R. Welch of San Francisco, Will Cooley of Palo Alto, Billy Carndull and Moses Cavanaugh of Ravenswood, Michael F. Brown, formerly of San Mateo, Burleigh Murray of Beresford, Chase Littlejohn, W. J. Plump of this city, D. E. O'Keefe, his brother, James T., and Billy Casey of Menlo Park.

Now, I have promised to tell the readers of these articles why the wild ducks were here in such numbers and why, in my opinion, they practically went away. I am fully aware of the fact that you all will not agree with me, but I am convinced, without any spirit of egotism, that my theory is correct, but you are at liberty to accept it for what you may consider it worth. It would be a strange world, indeed, if we should all be of the same opinion on every subject. Chaos would be the inevitable and ultimate result. I happen to know men who will agree with you on any and everything, particularly when they are running for office, but politics is not duck hunting.

In writing to my old friend Walter R. Welch recently I expressed my views concerning the former presence of the wild birds and now their almost total absence from the marshes, but while he admitted I was right to a certain extent he was strongly of the opinion that it was cold lead, namely No. 4-5-6 and 7 shot that took the heavy toll of the webfoots. No doubt he was earnest in his views, but I believe there are other reasons more potent and far-reaching for the absence of the wild birds on this peninsula.

Now we will get down, so to speak, to bed rock.

The fundamental reason for the presence of wild ducks or geese in any given locality is a question of foods, and nothing else. The wild birds cannot exist on water alone and nature has provided them with an instinct that pilots their course to where that necessary food can be obtained. If it is not to be found in one place they possess the most beautiful little pair of wings to carry them on and on until their object is accomplished. Just as long as they locate plenty of food they will remain and year after year augment their numbers regardless of those that are shot and killed, but when that food is deprived them, either through the acts of man or otherwise, you might just as well oil up your shotgun, lay it carefully away, and with a heavy sigh explain to your friends and neighbors of the good old times that used to be. That is just about what I am attempting to do now.

If ever a man had the chance to work out my theory on the wild duck question and their foods, I certainly had that opportunity during the 50 years that have passed. I was so thoroughly imbued with duckitis that for years it was to me a study. It became a mild sort of mania with me. While hunting I lost no chance to observe the habits of the wild birds, where their feeding grounds were, what was the foods of the different species, why they moved better at certain stages of the tide, wind and moon and the reasons why they commenced to bid us goodbye some thirty odd years ago. I have seen the widgeon, green-winged teal, canvass backs and the greater scaup and bluebill practically disappear from this locality and in the next article I contribute to this paper I shall endeavor to convince the duck hunting boys of today the reason for their going. I hope I shall be successful.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.
For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.
If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.
It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.
But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.
